

Please do not weaken Indiana's telephone privacy law. Indiana's law--passed by the elected legislators of this State--best expresses the public policy that one's home should be a place of peace and refuge. Carving out an "established business relationship" exception contradicts this important public policy. Deference should be given to the elected representatives of the people of Indiana.